

Indiana Extracurricular Guide

The guidelines and examples contained in this guide are designed to help schools conduct their activities correctly, legally, and for the educational benefit of the students. By carefully accounting for the funding of activities, school administrators can sidestep financial problems and be prepared for all required audits. The guide covers legal authority and responsibilities, budgets, types of revenues and expenditures, reporting requirements, banking and investments, accounting, auditing, and types of activities funds. Examples of required forms and records are included. This guide will help school officials successfully navigate the complexities of Indiana's regulatory system.

Leading Schools Financially Anthology

School finance is not a spectator sport. It requires the involvement of all citizens. Leading Schools Financially: A Practical Anthology to School Finance informs the reader about organizations, budgets, governance, personnel, human relations, facilities, culture, ethical leadership, labor relations, tools of the trade, and equity. Virtually everything a school touches is connected to school finance. If you are involved in schools, this is a vital informational and resource book. Even if you are not directly connected with schools, you have a stake as a taxpayer and a concerned citizen.
